What's New In?

Port Magic is a program that detects the e-mail address and time of the "probers" who attempt to compromise your system. Although it originally started as a program to stop the software-spamming attacks of the "14:00:00ers" (portscanners), it's evolved to be more than that; It can be used to prevent all non-ICMP probes as well. How does it work? Port Magic uses port-spoofing to prevent standard scanning attacks. As soon as an attack is detected, the prober will attempt to use a port other than the one he was scanning for. In turn, Port Magic "masks" the prober's attacks by creating a "fake" port with the same address as that of the real port, and a time approximate to the time of the probe, and redirects the port scan attack to this "fake" port. Basically, if a standard portscan is detected, the prober will attempt to use a port other than the one he was scanning for. In turn, Port Magic "masks" the prober's attacks by creating a "fake" port with the same address as that of the real port, and a time approximate to the time of the probe, and redirects the port scan attack to this "fake" port. This is the first step. Another step involves keeping track of the IP address of the "masked" prober and their probes, in order to report them when they're found. Once you've downloaded and installed Port Magic, fire it up: Click the Check Portscans button on the program's main window. It will start spinning and pick up incoming scans. You will now be notified of attacks against a target IP address. You can select which addresses to monitor, and you can select how much time you want to filter the portscan reports. Port Magic will pick up attacks for the time span you've selected; if you happen to be away from your computer at the time, you can come back to find them in your inbox. Port Magic will display ports that were probed using any of the known portscanners. You can use the numbers shown to narrow down the list to the specific probes you're interested in. Here you can choose what you want to report about attacks. You can choose to report standard portscanning probes, "time-based" probes
