Michelangelo was the most famous sculptor and painter of all time. He was born in 1475 and died in 1564. This is an illustration of Michelangelo's David. Note that it has been re-scaled to make the pieces of the sculpture to the right fit on this page. It was intended to be placed in the city's square, the Piazza della Signoria. A new study examining the prevalence of autism spectrum disorder in a kindergarten cohort revealed that prevalence rates remain stable for most children who receive an autism diagnosis between age 3 and 5. The findings, published in the Journal of Child Psychology and Psychiatry, suggest that parent-reported symptoms of autism spectrum disorder in kindergarten may reflect conditions that have existed for some time, rather than indicating a short-term increase in the condition. The study examined 5,180 children in British Columbia who had been assessed for autism spectrum disorder using the Social Communication Questionnaire at ages 3, 4, 5 and 6. Overall, 28 percent of the children who had a diagnosis of autism spectrum disorder at age 3 also had a diagnosis at age 5, and 35 percent of the children had a diagnosis at age 4. "The large majority of children who were diagnosed at age 3 remained diagnosed at age 5," said lead author Sara E. M. Beidas, PhD, assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of British Columbia and child psychiatry fellow at the University of Alberta. "These findings support earlier longitudinal research"
