What's new in Anemoiapolis: Chapter 1:

NEW DELHI, THE TERRITORY OF GALAXY 21/08/2005 July 21, 2014, DCF NYE. New year, new life, new manner. I was in Delhi 25-30 years ago. It was a wild-west city, a city where you could breath, walk, look about, and there was no crime and no yes-ism, where you paid for your stuff and could go wherever and whatever. I've been back to Delhi several times since then, and it's a whole lot of a different place in terms of rapid progress and intense development. Each time the city feels hotter, dustier, and more cramped, with people everywhere on the streets. All the good habits people learn in India disappear quickly. You have to realize that most people in India are poor, and the few that aren't poor know that culture of poverty. While I don't hate them, I do feel some unease with seeing people so swept up in it all. That being said, what walks into the Delhi Foreign Correspondents' Club on Friday morning is a slightly new phenomenon- it doesn't feel too different from any of the city's other popular and well-known tourist spots. An rickshaw driver in a bright orange t-shirt, holding an idiotic grin and a beaded necklace around his neck, calls out "Hey!" from the street in front of the pedestrian gate. Inside, the DCFNYE is non-descript (at least from the front, I don't think there's much to look at). Waiters dutifully take your order and make deliveries with an aplomb reserved for old-school Europeans. But, as we sit down at the table, I see a couple of things that signal the new India. First, the complimentary café catered buffet table (Bassi's or something) is non-existent. The spread here is much more people-centric. The spread is churrasco meat, naan bread, rice and bread sticks, and dahl-style lentils. The dahl is made with whole, still-shelled, dried lentils, and is an interesting cultural and flavor twist. The lentils are hot, which adds a nice spiciness to the dish, but it's almost hard to eat the lentils with the mixture of the rice, bread,

Q: If  $a^2b^2$  and  $a^3c^3$  have distinct prime factors, what can we say about the product? Let  $a, b, c \in \mathbb{N}$  be such that  $ab$ ,  $a^2b$ ,  $a^3c$ ,  $a^2bc$ , and  $a^2b^2c$  all have distinct prime factors. I have shown that  $a^2b^2$  and  $a^3c^3$  are coprime, but I am stuck as to what other generalizations of this can be proved. Is there a theorem that states, for instance, that  $a^4b^4$  must have  $ab$  as a factor, or  $a^8$  must have  $a^4b^4$  as a factor, or something along those lines? A: As simple example  $a=1$ ,  $b=3$ ,  $c=7$ ,  $ab=1*3=3$ ,  $a^2b=1*9=9$ ,  $a^3c=1*27=27$  and  $a^2$
