I can't believe I never knew about this game! I've always been a solitaire fan and loved this game. I have the original Klondike on my system and have played it off and on but never spent more than 10 minutes on it. I've been playing your remake since you posted it and I'm totally blown away! I think I prefer this game to the original. I would love to see a remake of the original Cub (for TSR) with a different theme like "Your Brain". Or better yet, a remake of Bohnanza where you move each tile individually instead of by pivoting. I am also waiting for someone to make the original SnailGame 2 where you can move tiles around to create the best combination of Snails. I would love to have that available on the Xbox360 since I don't have a Gamecube. I have enjoyed the Klondike remake by Mike Edwards since he began working on it. I would like to see some updates to it. It would be nice to have the bonus option of moving forward or backwards by 1 space in a column. Also, the grid for the game could be bigger. I think the easiest updates to the game would be a column that allows the player to choose from which suits to move the next card. I think that this would be an added feature since many of the alternate moves are definitely harder than the standard method. I think this would require some changes in the game algorithm as well as an easier interface. I'm now working on an updated Klondike where the computer will calculate the next move for you and it'll just click it. (Like its supposed to.) Unfortunately, it won't quite work correctly for a couple of reasons. Namely: 1. If you click on the wrong tile or if you click it when you're out of moves (ie, it's the end of the game) you won't see the next move. 2. The "Next Move" button won't tell you where to move after you pick it. Any chance you'd be willing to release a demo to see what it would look like? I think it's something I'd be interested in, and not just for the novelty of playing a new game with actual mouse clicks! This is very much like the "30" in Bohnanza, but Bohnanza is a very different game. In Bohnanza, you are given a list
