This new program provides another level of freedom for developers that lets them distribute their apps outside of the official Play Store, and will also enable more people to discover and experience their apps. Players must solve puzzles and interact with other characters to make progress through the time loop, all while being the familiar character that they've grown up with. By the time Phil Jr. reaches the end of the game, he will have spent eight months revisiting his hometown of Punxsutawney. Phil Connors Jr. is the protagonist of the story, and we play as him as he leaves his suburban life behind, his car breaks down in the woods, and he suddenly finds himself in his old hometown of Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania. With no idea how he got there, and with no memory of who he is, Phil Connors Jr. must start from the beginning and solve the mystery of the time loop that seems to have trapped him. His journey involves solving puzzles to progress, including a snowmobile chase through town, a series of car crashes, an escape from a prison that he himself is in, and the rescue of his puppy Millie. It also involves interacting with new characters, and finding out about old friendships as he makes his way through the time loop, uncovering clues to the mystery of how he ended up in the town. The story of Groundhog Day is not the only inspiration for this game, and will be a bit of a mix of genres, including visual novel, puzzle, adventure and comedy elements. Groundhog Day: Like Father Like Son is a fun, comedic story with gameplay elements that is completely different than what people are used to from the film or from other media. While players may play the game in story mode or in either of the 2 puzzle-solving modes (Adventure mode and Puzzle mode), it is recommended that players first try out the Adventure mode to get a taste of the experience. This mode will be the best way for people to get used to the story and the puzzle mechanics, but playing through the story in puzzle mode is recommended for those who have experience with traditional video games, and those who enjoy having the ability to explore the story and the gameplay at their own pace. To help players through the

What's new in Groundhog Day: Like Father Like Son:

Each year in Punxsutawney, the global broadcast of the Groundhog Day ritual pokes its finger into the mornings of thousands of observant Americans. Some harebrained Alaskan meteorologist secretly observes a century-old ritual to forecast the Winter and Spring rains, consistent with the prevailing weather patterns of the region, and predicted weather conditions. Rather than worry about his personal finances and health, the devout Latvian-American plans for the 25th of February each year with an almost Shakespearean sense of destiny. MADISON, Wis. - This morning, I stepped into a church on a cloudy Memorial Day, the last service of the 2015 legislative session. I hoped my former colleagues had left on a good note, honoring a great tradition and quietly concluding a grueling session that produced the most partisan and contentious elections in Wisconsin history. Dozens of supporters stood in front of the pulpit, many wearing Republican "Make America Great Again" hats. Many were walking into the pulpit itself, to the consternation of assembled clergy. People were hugging and having their photos taken outside. It was an outpouring of the kind of emotions normally reserved for the Eucharist, and the hearty singing broke out like it were page three of the program. "Amen," they sang. At the call for the Lord's Prayer, the pastor whispered, "Every vote counts." Madison and his significant others had taken the field in the early morning and were sleeping. Republicans left the Speaker's conference on a predictable statement of futility. The ten men and women remained in the room and spoke in somber tones. Republican leaders, lacking their customary spirit of camaraderie, began complaining of Democrats lacking "a rudimentary understanding of why the reforms begun by the governor created unprecedented accountability in Wisconsin. They lack an appreciation for the reforms and the reason for them." The day the Speaker held out his hand on the last day of the session, he suggested Democrats needed to "show up to the Capitol" to find common ground on the reforms and made it clear he intended to work with everyone on the condition of reforming government. It was a standard acknowledgment of a shared commitment to reform. But Democrats had other ideas. "When Progressives don't progress," as one speaker put it, "they regress." Wisconsin's chief physician announced he would continue to cast his ballot for the Freedom Party because it represents "liberty and the liberties of the people" and rejects what he calls the
