Using layers A _layer_ in Photoshop is a background with a form — in other words, a raster image placed on top of another raster image. Layers offer a series of options for making changes to one layer, which can then be applied to other layers. You can change the color of a layer, move it or rotate it, add text, add shapes, or change the type of layer — and then combine all these choices into one single layer. If you were to view all the layers in an image, you'd see as many layers as there are original raster images. You can adjust the settings of a layer to change the way it looks or how it affects other layers. If you'd like to see how all the layers in an image affect one another, you can view the layer stack — which gives you a visual representation of the layers in an image. When viewing this stacked image, you can easily rearrange or modify the order of any of the layers to create a new effect, as shown in Figure 4-3. FIGURE 4-3: In this example, the layers were created as you work with the photoshop file.

Q: PHP file upload: file is not uploaded to the server (probably due to permissions) I'm having a weird problem with php: I'm trying to upload a file to the server and a DB table, but I am getting the following error: upload failed: The file is too large in /Users/skender/Sites/upload.php The problem is the size of the file. I have the value set to 100 MB. The upload_max_size is set to 2097151. As of now, I don't see a way of changing that in my php.ini file. I checked the owner of the folder and the group of the folder, they are all the same. I checked the permissions of the directory and the file. They are 0755. I tried to run php from the terminal and it says that the size of the file is 1.2 GB. I checked the values for the maximum size and the upload_max_filesize in /etc/php5/cli/php.ini. Also, when I run a file upload I receive a different error: Warning: mysqli_query(): Couldn't fetch mysqli in /Users/skender/Sites/upload.php on line 7 What could be the cause of this weird problem? Thank you. A: To upload large files in php file_upload function (and other functions from the same class) have a maximum value of 2147483647 by default (if I remember correctly). So, you will need to change the php.ini value. Source: You could use this in your php.ini upload_max_filesize = 20M post_max_size = 20M 4 Best British Motorcycle Hotels Welcome to Motel.com's roundup of the best motorcycle hotels in the UK.
