Features Key:

Vast World and Exciting Missions

- Explore an open-field world where open fields with a variety of situations and huge dungeons with complex and three-dimensional designs are seamlessly connected.
- Recent development continues. Level-surfing is still in development, but will be released some time in 2019.

Unrivaled Customization

- Combine Weapons, Armor, and Magic Any Way You Like

Develop Your Own World

- Outfit your character with weapons, armor, and magic of your own
- Since the game is card-based, each character has their own deck of cards. These cards reveal their strengths, so you have to choose carefully according to the strength of the character you're raising.

Comprehensive Voices

- Explore a colorful fantasy world where voices such as a cheerful girl, a childish girl, a stern woman, a sexy man, and an old man can be combined together.
- The voice tutoring system allows you to make your own music.
- Narrated cutscenes, which occur when you hear particular voices, are activated as you save the game.

This Showcased Game Includes:

- Ten voice tutors
- Two voice lines: a girl's playful and cheerful voice for the main protagonist, and a wordless, friendly voice for other characters
- Character creation for the boy and girl with 8 pieces of optional face palettes
  - The girl has three skin palettes: seaweed, chibi, and plump
  - The boy has five skin palettes: studious, fox, wolf, pandaren, and shadow
- The boy has three optional face palettes.

What's new:

The rating of Player's is 0 according to RubyMotion. The value of a player is nil according to RubyMotion. Just see the videos for more information. A: Your problem is that you are not setting the :player value. In order for it to work, you must have a Player object with a :id and :player key. Your current player is nil and nil.new creates a new Player object and assigns nil to the key not nil. I suggest you read this tutorial. Q: jQuery return string after each.each call I am having trouble getting an array of returned values from a.each function within a plugin. Here's the structure I'm working with: $.fn.myPlugin = function(options) { options = options || {}; var tmp = []; var $this = $(this); $this.each(function() { tmp[tmp.length] = function() { // do something }; }); $this.each(function(i) { for (var i = 0; i < tmp.length; i++) { tmp[i].apply(); } }); return tmp; }; If I do console.log($.map(counties, function(county){return county.name; })); It will output an array that has all of my elements in the array, but with the first element's value set to "undefined" and the length of the array being 0. What I want is an array with the county names, but for every COUNTY name so each one has its own county name. A: I am afraid, return value is like primitive. You have to assign it to variable first. $.fn.myPlugin = function(options) { options = options || {}; var tmp = []; var $this = $(this); $this.each(function() {

One of the header columns has an image and on mouseover i want to change the CSS of the image. I've managed this by creating a directive but i'm stuck on how i can make another ng-repeat row out of the one where i have the header image. {{client.name}} {{client.phone}} {{client.address}} {{client.email}} The variable vm.clients holds users from an API. A: There's no need for a repeat statement at all. Just add another which also contains the which contains your image. When you mouseover the image, use the directive to change the logo and update the html. Q: Plugin for PDFs generated from Docs, Slides, and Figures
