Building on the success of Star Conflict and the tactical Star Cruiser franchise, Red Maple Games brings you Concealed Intent. Concealed Intent is a simultaneous turn-based space game where the world around you is constantly changing. Your only job is to keep moving while ducking, weaving and shooting. If you can be concealed, you can survive. But there's no hiding when a target gets a lock on you. The only questions are, when will they fire, how much will they miss and how good a shot will they be? Key Features Immerse yourself in an exciting turn based space combat simulation. Play single player or compete against human and AI opponents in a sandbox campaign or Instant Procedural PVE and PvP skirmishes. A physics based combat engine that creates engaging gameplay and tension. With every maneuver in combat, the universe around you is continually changing. You need to constantly adapt your strategy to compensate for the ever changing reality of the world around you. Use a dynamic mission structure that adapts gameplay to each player's playstyle. Concealed Intent is your game, not our game. A unique deployment system allows you to customize your fleet to your playstyle and run a full game with just one ship. Non-random ship configurations allow for tons of replayability. Being able to save and replay missions creates endless different strategic situations for every single fleet. Ship Mechanics Multiple ships in your fleet, every single ship can be configured. As you design your ships, you configure: Speed Size Energy consumptions Weapons Shields Hardpoints Reduced drive drive Jump drive Whether it's a fighting ship, a survey ship or a research ship, Concealed Intent gives you the freedom to play the game how you like, mixing and matching several different ships, so every fleet is unique. Landscapes and planets With all the ships you can design, Concealed Intent generates multiple procedurally generated planets and moons with full atmospheres, gravity, and landscapes on top of a fully 3D dynamic physics engine, each with its own set of unique gameplay dynamics, and danger to contend with. Each planet has its own atmosphere, gravity, weather, landscapes, wildlife, including hazardous wildlife. Each planet will react to your presence in different ways, making each one unique to its own. Every planet has a unique environment, atmosphere, weather, landscapes, wildlife, and danger, potentially deadly if you remain in one place too long. Try playing on Venus. Unparalleled Mission Struct

Without even looking at the gameplay I have known for some time that a MOBA and tower defense game would be a good thing. Having played Dragon Front quite a bit as a tower defense game, I found it to have some solid ideas and mechanics but it was a little too lacking in a lot of ways. Stormbound has managed to achieve a mix of both games but more so a MOBA that is as fun and addictive as any tower defense game I've played, and while it may not look like it, I would say that Stormbound can be a pretty deep game. One of the strengths of Stormbound are the skills and abilities you will have to work with. When you are first playing a tutorial level, you are given four different skills which must be selected in order for you to be able to play that level. Once you have a level you can actually assign those four skills to three of your four available spaces. Let me explain the flow of gameplay and levels: When you play the tutorial level for the first time, the level will not be graded yet, and if you have a high enough score, you will get the level to be graded for your first time, and you will need to select at least one of the four skills available, and you have to do that at the beginning of the level and that will unlock the next level of the game. The levels aren't very long, some of them are about 3-5 minutes of actual gameplay time, but they still give you a good tutorial on the game and are quite enjoyable. You will get another chance to play the level again without the grade in 3-5 minutes, and once you select the skill you need, you need to be quick about it because the game will begin when you press the X button. You will then need to defend for 3 minutes while attacking your enemies that come to destroy your tower. Your defense is based on where the first attack comes from, and as you've learned from playing the first tutorial level, a lot of times you won't even have time to read the first attack and have to think about it before the second and third attacks hit you, but eventually you will know what is coming and you'll be able to stop the attack and claim a score for your efforts. I liked the fact that you can change your skills to fit whatever kind of playstyle you like, and I liked that the games make your decision of which skill you will use

What's new:

"Over My Dead Body (For You)" is a song by American recording artist Christina Aguilera. It is the fourth and final single released from her fifth studio album, Back to Basics. The song was written by M.I.A., Jonas Jeberg, Nasri, Mike Elizondo and Redfoo of LMFAO, Hannah Madden, Hyuk Kim, and Christina Aguilera. The song is notable for the significant change in lyrics from Christina's previous single "Who I Am" in which she sings about devotion to an ex-lover. Instead, Aguilera expresses devotion to a new man. The song served as the album's fourth US number one, remaining there for one week. In Canada, the song reached number two, her first number two in that country. In Australia, the song debuted on the ARIA Singles Chart at number five. Background "Over My Dead Body (For You)" was written by M.I.A. and Nasri, Jonas Jeberg, Mike Elizondo, and Redfoo, together with Christina Aguilera. This song is a departure from her 2002 hit "Genie in a Bottle" where she sang about saving someone who was her true love. On the video clip for "Genie in a Bottle", she kissed him moments before falling off a boat. The song was written about a man who would not buy her flowers, with a worldwide remix in place of the man in the song who did not buy her flowers. Music video Background and release The music video, directed by Dave Meyers, contains the elements of Christina Aguilera's first, second, and fifth music videos. The three videos show Christina going through typical motions of her life, performing dance routines, and other everyday activities. While singing the "Work Work" hook (a version of the previous hit song "Genie in a Bottle" which is seen playing at all times) in the second part of the video, Christina wears a military outfit, held with a noose. She also sometimes wears a black hair covering. Also, in the second part of the video, she is dancing in front of two Christmas trees, with a noose around her neck and being strapped down to the floor with handcuffs. The outfits are probably referencing to the plot of the video. As well, there are two other outfits that she wears within this video. The first is black and has wings on it, another allusion of having been under "
