Konami's game development division has finally confirmed the date for the new version of PlayBoy. According to rumour, PSP9 is expected to be released in October, as according to a promotional video released by the site, the title will have a major "finishing touch" to its design. Additionally, the new games have been delayed until the end of December, according to the site. However, the preliminary scheduled release date was set on October 4th, but during the presentation they revealed that the scheduled release date had changed. 25-Sep-2015 01:51 Wii U Not Dead The death of the Wii U has been exaggerated for the last few years. While the console has certainly been behind its competitors and lost lots of market share, we have seen the Wii U gain back the market share it lost. The Wii U is still the best selling console in Europe, with 4 million units sold in the region this past Christmas. If anything, it has shown the spirit of Nintendo, as an underdog continuing to innovate and surprise its fans with new titles. The Wii U is currently the best selling console in the market in Japan and the UK, with the Wii U in the UK selling over 3 million consoles. Source: NintendoSource: Siliconera 25-Sep-2015 01:51
