C++. According to Autodesk, "AutoCAD is a product that could be run on a variety of different platforms. In fact, the majority of our users run AutoCAD on Windows computers."

As of 2017, there are over two million registered users on AutoCAD Online (formerly Autodesk Network). App Builder (Mac OS) allows third party developers to create AutoCAD extensions and applications. Some of these applications are commercially available.

The AutoCAD API for Visual LISP was developed to make it easy for Autodesk users to create their own applications based on the Visual LISP environment. The Visual LISP API was based on the Visual LISP environment used to develop AutoCAD extensions and applications. As of June 2014, Autodesk acquired a large number of third-party Visual LISP developers, and their code is integrated into Autodesk's own Visual LISP environment. This includes: Phaser 3D DAZ Studio Tesseract OCR Core Technology

The core technology components of AutoCAD are: CAD DB CAD API CAD Gateway CAD Manager CAD SDK API SDK Network SDK AutoLISP .NET

The product line Autodesk Revit was released in 2008. The successor product was released in 2016 and it was renamed to Autodesk Architecture. The different interfaces are described in more detail in the following sections.

CAD Manager

CAD Manager is an application launcher and service. When the application launcher is installed, it starts up automatically when a new version of AutoCAD is installed. It contains an application repository for storing the application files and the AutoCAD Windows registry settings. The CAD Manager also contains the AutoCAD user interface, which provides a way to organize the icons on the desktop for easy access to applications. The CAD Manager is also the CAD Manager user interface. CAD API The AutoCAD API is an application programming interface (API) that allows applications to communicate with the AutoCAD program. The interface includes a C++ type library that can be used by Visual LISP. CAD API is a set of application programming interfaces that allow access to AutoCAD. CAD API is available on Windows, Mac and Linux. Windows and Linux versions of CAD API are part of the base AutoCAD product. Mac version of CAD API is provided in ca3bfb1094

Mixed martial artist Colby Covington had his UFC 232 pay-per-view bout against Demetrious Johnson this weekend scrapped because the former interim champ turned to Instagram, TMZ has learned. A source close to Covington tells TMZ... the Nevada Athletic Commission (NAC) pulled the plug on the fight and ordered it off the card because of Covington's obscene gestures. We're told the commission tried to postpone the bout and Covington was cooperative but after he started exchanging threats, he told the NAC to take it or leave it. TMZ broke the story... Covington made a foul-mouthed comment about his opponent after the weigh-in and announced it to the media. "I hope he doesn't pull a Conor McGregor and try to ghost ride this (expletive)," Covington said. Covington also took shots at the commission and the media. The two grapplers finally squared off in the main event of UFC on ESPN 2, but in an apparent attempt to promote the rematch, Covington posted a provocative photo on Instagram that involved himself and a woman. The photo, which showed Covington slapping the woman around, immediately prompted the commission to kick the fight off the card and it's now believed that's what Covington was trying to do. We're told the commission wants Covington to fight again and would prefer he don't promote anything that would push it off. Covington was one of the best fighters in the UFC during a run from 2015-2016, earning the interim title and even challenging for a UFC belt. He was knocked out by Anthony Pettis in his next outing and was released from the company.
