On Saturday, Pope Francis will preside over the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the institution of the Jubilee Year of Mercy, a Jubilee that ends on the feast of the First Sunday of Lent, this year. In 1585, Pope Sixtus V "announced a jubilee throughout the Catholic world for the year 1590, so that the Lord, in his mercy, would help poor Christians everywhere," says a statement from the Vatican website, as Pope Francis prepares to pronounce the jubilee, which will go on until December 8. "In fact, after this Jubilee, only the jubilee of 2000 will mark a Jubilee of Mercy." On Monday, the daily Angelus will include special prayers for our "brothers and sisters in need," reported Vatican Radio. On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the pope will also host a "General Audience to mark the end of the jubilee of mercy." Arlene Foster has been critical of a commitment given by Brussels to ensure that no solution is imposed on the North. Photograph: Liam McBurney/PA Northern Ireland's secretary of state, Karen Bradley, has said the British and Irish governments are committed to achieving a "successful, balanced and lasting" Brexit and said she hopes a solution can be found for the Irish border issue. Speaking at a meeting in Dublin of the Inter-Governmental Conference on North South Co-operation, she sought to play down the risks of leaving the EU and said the government's priority was securing the best possible deal from Brexit. The Northern Ireland secretary repeated the British government's commitment to maintain full access to the single market through the EU after Brexit and to maintain a seamless border with the Republic. Ms Bradley added: "We acknowledge concerns on both sides of the border, but emphasise our commitment to maintaining full access to the single market and to ensure there is no return to a hard border. "The government will do all it can to secure the best possible deal for the people of Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom, and will do everything it can to protect the very hard-won peace and prosperity of the region." The IGC meeting of the governments of Ireland, Northern Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England, followed a joint ministerial committee on Brexit meeting in Dublin last week. The Irish government said the UK's repeated failure to progress the negotiations had created uncertainty, which had led to a £1.6 billion fall in the value of its largest asset, its public sector pensions, since the referendum. In a statement, Ms Bradley said she fully supported the European commission's analysis of the consequences of the UK leaving the EU, which had shown the negative impact on Northern Ireland. "The progress we make through the negotiations will determine the future of our economic prosperity and the future for people in Northern Ireland," she said. "Ensuring that Northern Ireland and Ireland can continue to thrive after we leave the EU is our top priority. We need to remain focused on securing the best possible outcome for the people of Northern Ireland and for the United Kingdom." The Northern Ireland secretary did not address criticism of the British government by Arlene Foster for not taking part in earlier talks between Irish and British ministers in the wake of the Brexit vote. The DUP leader said there
