Over the past few years, ndexer has worked hard to make a name for itself in the growing field of software and application reviewQ: using min and max in for loop I have a function that takes a string as input, then finds the first duplicate string, and returns the number of occurrences. Please check the code and help me in maximizing the performance. def find_duplicates(string): for a in string: if string[0] != a: string = string[1:] if string[-1] != a: string = string[:-1] a_count = a_count+1 return a_count I know that the code works correctly, but I wonder if there is a better way to find the first duplicate. A: You can use collections.Counter for this >>> from collections import Counter >>> string = "This is a string" >>> Counter(string)
