But should you be eyeing it up on the secondhand rack, the big news here is that the frame is getting an upgrade with a new modern head tube shape that has no tapering at the bottom. It's part of a wider upgrade that also includes a new XTR rear derailleur (170g) and a new XTR shifter (146g). It's not a complete overhaul, but it does have a slightly different look to it. The ride geometry remains the same as it has always been, with a slightly more upright position and head angle of 74.3°. The new head tube shape makes for a different riding position, with less bottom bracket drop and a more forward position of the head, but also a bit more stack height.Too Many Third Kids
