“HyperMotion Technology is a huge advancement on the intensity, realism and immersion of the on-pitch experience for players,” said Kevin Chou, Co-Founder, CEO and Creative Director of DICE. “We can now deliver a more complete football experience, and players will feel more connected and stronger on the pitch.” The new ball physics technology was tuned by DICE scientists to more realistically respond to and feel like a real ball. Their goal was to enhance the ball's unpredictable flight paths, ensuring that it feels and behaves like a true football that players of different ball skills can choose to control. "As we designed the ball physics in FIFA, we continuously consulted with leading experts in the sport, including players, coaches and ball makers," said Dan Harris, Creative Director, DICE. "We were incredibly inspired by all the feedback we received, and our goal was to deliver the best football experience possible. The new ball physics will add a greater sense of realism to every aspect of the gameplay." The gameplay systems have been further enhanced, bringing more responsiveness to multiple players on the pitch, as well as a new strike zone indicator that improves the accuracy of attacks. Players are also able to learn and adjust their skill sets and strengths throughout the game. DICE made improvements to the Attacking Intelligence system, which simulates the strategic moves of the whole team. Fifa 22 Crack Mac also introduces Zones, which is a new way to play the sport and brings change to the game's gameplay features. Zones include Zones of Play that govern how players are and can be controlled, as well as different gameplay Modes.
