Characterization of novel GTP-binding proteins in rat spinal cord. GTP-binding proteins (G-proteins) were characterized in a rat spinal cord homogenate. Three proteins of molecular weights of 39,000 (39K), 37,000 (37K) and 36,000 (36K) were detected by means of [35S]GTP gamma S autoradiography, and their existence was confirmed by immunoblotting. The 38K and 36K proteins were tightly bound to a hydroxyapatite column, whereas the 39K protein was released. The 38K and 36K proteins were eluted with a KCl concentration gradient, the latter being the major G-protein species. The 38K and 36K proteins were detected only in the cytosolic fraction, whereas the 39K protein was present in both cytosolic and membrane fractions. The 38K protein could be precipitated with anti-rat GTP-binding protein (G-protein beta gamma) and anti-rat G-protein alpha-subunit antibodies. The 36K and 39K proteins were precipitated with anti-rat G-protein alpha-subunit antibody, but not with anti-rat GTP-binding protein antibodies. These results suggest that the 38K and 36K proteins may be the rat G-proteins beta gamma and alpha-subunits, respectively. The real economic incentive for the U.S. government in the recent deal reached with the European Union on Iran's nuclear program will be to prevent a general uprising among the people of Europe. The last thing the ruling elite want is a movement of solidarity among the general population. It won't be long until the vast majority of the people discover the utter hollowness of the Western capitalist system, and then the elite face the possibility of total collapse. When that collapse comes, it will be an insurrection not just against a political and social system, but an insurrection 6d1f23a050
