Wondershare Dr.Fone toolkit Crack is an Android data recovery. VueScan Pro 9.6.46 Crack With Keygen 2019 Full Free Download [Win+Mac.Q: How to maintain state object on BroadcastReceiver at background? In my application on arrival of SMS, I need to send the same SMS to all the numbers in database. If I send it asynchronously, all the devices will receive the SMS at same time and some may not receive it. So, I added a state based broadcast receiver at broadcast receiver to maintain state if we received any SMS. However, after testing for the first time, I realized all devices receives the SMS at same time, despite the state I saved. But, when I relaunch the application and try to send it again it says I/otifile: Send SMS Error:Could not send SMS to number: I know it's because of state I have. What should I do so that my application can receive SMS, when it's launched? In case of relaunching the application, the broadcast receiver will not listen to any broadcast? I don't want my application to receive the SMS over and over again with no changes. A: But, when I relaunch the application and try to send it again it says The device is not in a state where it could receive broadcasts. How can I maintain the state I saved on broadcast receiver when restarting the application? If that is your requirement and you want the data to persist even after the phone reboot, you will need to persist that data somewhere else (maybe on the persistent storage?). If you want to save it while the phone is alive, then you cannot. If you want to save it when the phone is about to reboot and you want it there also after the phone is rebooted, then that is possible. Broadcast receivers are fired only once per installation and they have limited life time. You will need to save some static data while the phone is running and restore it on the next time you open the app. 6d1f23a050
